ERIC LEVIN REPORTS

Countercultural Carson Show: This summer, a syndicated, weekly talk show called SpeakEasy is enticing leading rock stars--such as BILL WYMAN of the ROLLING STONES, FRANK ZAPPA, DAVE MASON, BONNIE RAITT and EMERSON, LAKE & PALMER--to relax and be themselves on camera, and play a little music. Most of the credit for getting these usually elusive characters on TV in a nonconcert format belongs to SpeakEasy's host, CHIP MONCK. Chip has been an emcee only once before--at Woodstock. His real credentials are as a lighting and production technician, having built stages and designed lights for the Stones, JOHN LENNON, the Monterey Pop Festival, the Bangladesh Benefit Concert, the Fillmore Ballroom and Woodstock, to name just a few. "Basically, I'm trading on my reputation," he told us. "Most of these people I've had the pleasure of working with, rubbing against, or trying to collect an unpaid bill from. Many of them are understandably suspicious about TV. But a lot of them have become good friends, and I simply say, as I said to Bill Wyman, 'I have something I'm doing I'd love to get you involved in.' The hardest thing is finding them. Getting through all the people dedicated to shielding them takes persistence."

JACKIE STEWART, the retired world racing champion, will comment on the Grand Prix of Monaco June 8 with sportscaster KEITH JACKSON on ABC's Wide World of Sports . . . More ape gaping: Next season, CBS will air "Battle for the Planet of the Apes" and "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes," both starring RODDY McDOWALL under lots of make-up . . . ROBERT SHAW and SOPHIA LOREN will star in "Brief Encounter" by Sir NOEL COWARD next season on NBC's Hall of Fame . . . ANNE MEARA will star in two vignettes in PBS's June 24 special, "The Male Menopause: The Pause that Perplexes." The host will be Emmy-winner WILLIAM WINDOM. Folksinger OSCAR BRAND has written original music about the male menopause predicament, which the producers explain is largely "a crisis of mind and spirit."

RODNEY DANGERFIELD, the comic, is a pessimist who'd like to be an optimist. "The streets aren't safe, the subways aren't safe," he complains to us, "but under the arms we got complete protection!" Rodney will bring his sad-sack humor ("I don't get no respect" is his motto) to Dean Martin's Comedyworld on NBC every week this summer via taped performances from his New York night club. There, recently, we found the puffy-faced comedian after his show, sitting near the bar in a bathrobe. "Do big things when you're young, kid," he said. "Me, I'm 52. When you get older, your health is the thing. A whole life of abuse catches up, and your values change. Lemme tell you something--do new things now, and when you get old, look after your health."

HOWDY DOODY

HOWDY DOODY

HOWDY DOODY

Someone Out There Is Listening

...and in 175 years they might even see 'Howdy Doody'

By Carl Sagan

We have just reached a remarkable point in the history of mankind—the moment when it becomes possible for us to make contact with intelligent beings on planets of other stars.

Radio and television are the means of contact. The distances between the stars are immense, but nothing travels faster than radio waves, which have a speed of 186,282 miles per second. Even so, it takes them four years to travel from the nearest star to Earth, and 30,000 years to travel from the center of our Milky Way Galaxy to Earth.

Suppose a civilization were to use a large radiotelescope to transmit information, and another civilization—ourselves, say—were to use a large radiotelescope to receive radio waves. Suppose further that both civilizations were just at our present Earthly level of technology and used the equivalent of our largest radiotelescope, the Arecibo dish in Puerto Rico, run by Cornell University for the National Science Foundation. With it, we can detect radio signals from planets of any one of the approximately 250 billion stars which make up the Milky Way Galaxy, if only we knew which star to look at and what "station" (or frequency) to tune in on.

The first serious attempt to listen to possible signals beamed our way was made by Frank Drake, now at Cornell University, back in 1960. He pointed an 85-foot diameter radiotelescope at two near-by stars rather like the Sun, stars called Epsilon Eridani and Tau Ceti. For the few hours he listened to each star, there was no message to be discerned. Since that time, several hundred near-by stars have been examined at one or two frequencies each by radioastronomers in the United States and the Soviet Union. All results have been negative so far; but this is expected. Even the most optimistic estimates of the abundance of technical civilizations in the Galaxy suggest that hundreds of thousands of stars—not hundreds—must be examined before we have a fair chance of picking up the signals of an advanced civilization.

The consequences of such a contact would be inestimable. If we think of the major scientific, technical and cultural advances made on Earth in the last few hundred years, what capabilities might a society thousands or millions of years in our future have?

In talking about this subject, I find many people have the response: "It sounds perfectly fine to listen, but for heaven's sake, don't send!" Some people are worried that we should not reveal our location in the Galaxy. They are concerned that the extraterrestrials will come to Earth and do something dreadful—like eat us.

It is too late to worry. We have already revealed our presence to the Galaxy. Astronomers have not sent radio messages into space giving our locale. We have not intentionally sent signals to the nearest stars. Instead, the messages which have been sent come from much more mundane activities.

The high-frequency signals of the AM broadcast band occasionally trickle through the Earth's ionosphere, but ordinarily they are bounced back to the surface. But military radar systems, scanning the skies for possible hostile airplanes and missiles, send powerful pulses of radio waves out into space. And television—good old familiar domestic television—is escaping from the confines of our little planet all the time. This television transmission is very powerful and could easily be detected by a civilization no more advanced than we at a few light-years, the distance of the nearest stars. A civilization only a little more advanced than we should have no trouble picking up such signals at distances of hundreds of light-years.

But our television signals have not gotten that far. Large-scale domestic television programming began in the late 1940s and early 1950s, about 25 years ago. Thus there is a spherical wave front expanding outward at the velocity of light in all directions from Earth—containing what? Why, containing Milton Berle, Howdy Doody, the Army-McCarthy Hearings, and other signs of intelligent life on Earth.

This is an extremely sobering thought. For those who have wondered why, if there are so many intelligent beings out there in space, they have not come to visit us—now we know.

But, realistically, I think we have a little breathing room. That wave front is about 25 light-years from Earth. There are probably no civilizations as close to us as 25 light-years. The nearest are probably a few hundred light-years away. So we have at least 175 years before they discover us. I can imagine them routinely scanning the heavens, using large but primitive radiotelescopes—they meanwhile will be using other means for communicating with other superior civilizations—and, stumbling upon our signals, gradually decoding Clarabell and Roy Cohn.

I can imagine them being very patient. They have waited millions of years; what's a few decades? Slowly they study our broadcasting through the '60s and '70s and '80s, the nature of our society gradually becoming clear.

And then they will have to decide what to do about us. Perhaps they'll just say, "Oh, yes! It's a type 17ZD civilization. Leave them alone for a few centuries, and either they'll destroy themselves or grow up." Or maybe they'll have a different response.

I said before that it is too late. We have announced where we are. But we still have some choice over the image we project to the cosmos, over what we transmit about who we are. Television programmers, network executives, pay attention! Your ratings are higher than you know. Someone out there may be listening. END

'There Was This Ramshackle Garage in Georgetown'

A top news executive recalls 20 years of TV journalism

By Elmer Lower
President, ABC News

Elmer W. Lower's career spans 40 years and includes key posts at three major networks and in all branches of the journalistic profession. He has now been president of ABC News 10 years. In this article, Lower takes a look at his 20 years in the electronic media.

It was a most inauspicious debut. I was less than impressed with the ramshackle garage in Georgetown, its ill-fitting door and makeshift sign that read: "CBS Television News, Washington Bureau." The 20 previous years in print journalism had taken me into some pretty makeshift situations and, while I knew television news was in its infancy, I felt this facility lacked that certain element of class for which CBS had become known. The casement windows were leaky and the autumn wind swept a few leaves under the door. This is how it was in September, 1953, when I reported to Sig Mickelson, a lanky Midwesterner who was then director—later general manager and president—of CBS Television News.

No one was quite sure then what television news was really supposed to be. John Cameron Swayze was holding forth with the Camel News Caravan on NBC and the CBS competition was the quarter-hour nightly program Douglas Edwards with the News. ABC hadn't taken its first shaky steps into television news yet. Color TV was of no concern.

Nobody really believed that the American appetite for news would eventually demand a half hour of network time and that many cities would augment this service by a half hour or even an hour of local news. The idea of a single network spending $50 million a year on a news service was unthinkable. Twenty years later, in 1972, ABC, CBS and NBC were to spend a total of $159,-264,000 on news, a great part of which was the payroll for more than 3000 people. This doesn't include another $275 million spent on local news on both radio and television. Today, local television stations are putting as much as 12 per cent of their operating costs into news-room expenses.

Mickelson told me in his best pep-talk style that my job as Washington Bureau chief was to beat NBC News five nights a week with coverage of the Nation's capital in news film that was better than Swayze's. CBS wanted a bigger share of the estimated 15 million people who watched the news every night. The two networks then served about 140 stations. Today the count has expanded to more than 600, with an audience for network news of 50 million.

The competition was there in the beginning. The foe was not only NBC, but UPI-Fox-Movietone, which supplied film to stations on the same tight deadline. I saw the action my first day on the job. Both CBS and UPI-Fox used the film laboratory next door to our garage-office. I watched two competing motorcycle couriers race for the → same lab that day. Our film had to arrive first to go into the developing machine to make the deadline for our 7:30 P.M. show. UPI had a similar problem. The second film to arrive would miss. Bob Funk, our resident daredevil, braked to a screeching stop at a traffic light one block from the laboratory. He was only seconds ahead of UPI's courier. Waiting for the stoplight would cost him 20 seconds. He dropped his motorcycle at the curb and sprinted the final 200 yards on foot. He won.

By now, the two networks were getting away from the idea of buying footage from newsreel companies. One of the problems of theater-type newsreel service was that it wasn't equipped for the amount of hard news television required. In one company, for instance, the overnight and weekend desk editors were not newsmen, but people with other jobs who were used primarily to alert supervisors to emergencies. They were plumbers, elevator operators, even actors.

Over one weekend a newsreel executive caught a portion of a TV broadcast reporting a ferry sinking in Japan with 1000 people aboard. He called the desk to ask if any of the 1000 were injured and the editor said, "Nope." Later the executive heard that 1000 people were missing. In a rage he called the desk again and screamed, "You told me there wasn't anybody injured!" The deskman, who was really a locksmith by trade, said, "Yep, that's right. Nobody was injured. They were all killed."

While we in Washington kidded about working out of a garage, we were quick to point out that the New York end of the Evening News originated from an old German singing club on the Upper East Side known as the Liederkranz. The New York film portion of the show was put together in an office building 13 blocks away. The film crew would allow itself exactly 10 minutes in a taxi to get the day's footage to Liederkranz in time for the show. It was always a last-minute race.

Also, film was developed across town, which created a severe problem of logistics. I remember when film of Queen Elizabeth arrived at Idlewild Airport from Bermuda almost too late to get all the way across Manhattan in rush-hour traffic and back to Liederkranz by 7:30. The film director sent a portable processing machine directly to Liederkranz. He told the crew to develop the pictures there and run them on the air unedited. Naturally, the machine failed and the film rolled off dripping wet. We did the expedient thing. Three film editors stretched the Queen's arrival all over the men's room until it dried, then rushed it to the projector. The only noticeable slip-up was that the film was reversed, and the Queen and Prince Philip shook all hands with their lefts and saluted like southpaws.

Location stuff was difficult in those days. We had to make do with modified amateur cameras and heavy batteries. A lucky crew was one that could find an electric outlet. We sent a crew to Dallas to cover the first American concert of the mercurial Maria Callas. When the film was screened the next day in New York, the diva's arias were broken into short takes. There was not a single complete segment. It sounded terrible. The apologetic cameraman explained that he tried to keep the camera rolling, but he connected the camera's electric cord to a socket on the oboe player's music stand, without telling the oboe player. He didn't know that the oboeist had only short segments to play during the concert and whenever he was not oboeing, he turned off the light on his music stand—and, of course, the switch for our sound recording.

ABC finally started a regular news program. John Daly anchored the first ABC Evening News, with the network supplying three 15-minute feeds, which would allow stations to pick up the → program at the most convenient time. While the news department was astonished to find that not one single station carried the 6:45 P.M. feed, they nonetheless took advantage of the time and used it as a rehearsal. It was kinescoped and if all went well and there were no late newsbreaks, that same show was fed to the stations later on.

One Friday night after the first five minutes of the first show, the whole program came unglued. Film tore in the projector, two newsbreaks made the rehearsal useless, the kinescope machine went crazy and the teleprompter stopped. Daly threw his hands in the air in mock dismay and pretended to collapse over the desk. What the staff didn't know was that the ABC station in Philadelphia had special programming that night and was carrying Daly's 6:45 feed. There was much speculation in the City of Brotherly Love as to the seriousness of Daly's condition.

Another aspect of news programming was coming along. The Today show had been running on NBC since the beginning of 1952. But it was difficult for even those on the staff to believe that there was anybody watching. During the program on New Year's morning, Jan. 1, 1953, there was a general feeling of "Who are we kidding? We must be doing this show for ourselves!" Dave Garroway said as much on the air, and the cards and letters came literally in truckloads, and helped the networks realize there was a tremendous appetite for news out there.

In 1954, when the radio and television news departments of CBS were merged, I was brought to New York as director of Special Projects, one of the most important of which was to try to teach radio correspondents how to work with images in television. This was the most inventive era of television news. The production techniques everyone takes so much for granted today were only being figured out in the mid-'50s.

While the radio correspondents had been exceptionally well-qualified wire-service or newspaper reporters before they switched to radio, none had had any experience with visual journalism.

There is no way to take a quick retrospective view of even my last 10 years as president of ABC News, or the four years prior to that as vice president and general manager of NBC News.

Little things recall big events. I remember that 7 inches of snow fell the night before John F. Kennedy's inauguration and, not being able to get a cab to get to our crew, I hitchhiked a ride to the NBC Studios in Washington for the telecast. I remember the sickness I felt when I was told the news that President Kennedy had been shot; or the ire I felt listening to an ABC accountant complain about the cost of the uninterrupted three-and-a-half-day coverage of the assassination, then hearing one of my associates sadly put him down with, "Well, Mike, the next time they assassinate a President, we'll tell 'em to do it in Brooklyn where it won't cost so much to cover."

I remember being sounded out for the job of press secretary to candidate Richard Nixon in 1968—the hour-long talk with Ray Price, a Nixon speech writer, and the six words my wife issued later that night that ended the conversation with everybody: "I don't think you'd like it."

I remember the willingness of ABC president Elton Rule to lay a million dollars on the line to bet that if we teamed Harry Reasoner of CBS with Howard K. Smith, we would have one of those charismatic combinations that would make ABC news fully competitive with CBS and NBC, and the pleasure of watching it work out that way.

I remember being able to launch the most expensive documentary in the history of television—the 1967 four-hour program devoted to the continent of Africa. It was more of an event than a documentary. "Africa" was a prime-time artistic and rating success, and it lost a bundle of money. We started with a budget of just over a million dollars and managed finally to get it on the air for slightly under two million.

Memories of 20 years in television are a collage of talking dogs, chartered planes, Russian ambassadors, political conventions, too many murders and too many wars.

I always had an uneasy feeling sending our men and women off to cover Vietnam. Of course, they were all volunteers, but I never ceased to worry that they might never return. In the early years of the war we had, luckily, less than a dozen casualties, none of which was fatal.

But at the end of the war, tragedy struck in a cruel way. It was July 20, 1972. Terry Khoo, a cameraman from Singapore who had covered the war for us for seven years, was serving his last day. He had been given a new assignment in Bonn, Germany. He planned to get married in Hong Kong before flying to Bonn, but he was working on a film story on the horrors of war. He had found a letter on a dead North Vietnamese soldier which the Viet Cong had received from his wife. There were photographs of the wife and the soldier's children. Terry was searching for mood scenes which would match the reading of the letter in a filmed report. Terry's friend, Sam Kai Faye, arrived from Singapore as his replacement. Colleagues advised them against going out in the afternoon. But they did. They ran into an ambush and never returned.

Forty years is a long time to work at anything, but I've found a great satisfaction in doing the only thing I really know how to do—tell people what's going on. I wish much of it would have been happier, but I wouldn't have missed a minute of it for anything. END

Three Heroes Have Disappeared

—not to mention
motorcycles
and a hot-rod or two

By Leslie Raddatz

The casualties in Chase, one of NBC's entries in this year's cop sweepstakes, haven't been limited to the bad guys. Three of the heroes have disappeared.

At first, there were four principals. The Chase pilot film featured Mitchell Ryan, peerless leader and father figure, and three youths who operated helicopters, hot-rod cars and motorcycles respectively.

By the time the show went on the air weekly, another character had been added in the person of Wayne Mauder, whose function was to bridge the generation gap between Ryan and the three young mechanics.

Now the program is back to four "stars" again, but not the four who started it all. Ryan and Mauder have survived. The youthful trio have been replaced by veteran Gary Crosby and a newcomer named Craig Gardner. Executive producer Bob Cinader says, "We wanted to humanize the concept, de-emphasize the hardware. The original kids were hired to operate equipment. They just weren't working out too well."

The current foursome, although hardly ready to rival Dumas pere's Musketeers or the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse or the original Marx Brothers, do seem to have worked out well—at least when they weren't working. Before production of the series ended, it was evident to those who visited the set that they were a congenial quartet, ready with funny put downs, obviously enjoying each other and what they were doing.

Ryan, Mauder and Crosby would refer to Craig Gardner as "Gardner McCraig" or "Gordon McCraig." Ryan would tip-toe behind Mauder and Crosby into a scene he was not supposed to be in. After another scene, Mauder said to the director, "Report that Wayne is exhausted from carrying Gary," and Crosby riposted with, "We always do these scenes in one take. I don't see why people say you can't act." The spirit was so pleasant that someone setside said, "I wish they could get a little of that into the show."

The off-screen badinage seemed relaxed, but it may also have contained some element of desperation, of laughing to hide the fear underneath, of whistling walking past the graveyard. In a season with so many police shows on the air, Chase has not been one of the winners. It has had trouble in the ratings, and in April NBC revealed that it will not return next fall. The decision not to renew it is, obviously, a blow to the hopes of all four actors involved—but for different reasons.

For Mitchell Ryan, who plays Capt. Chase Reddick, the show has offered a crack at stardom after a 20-year career that spanned everything from soap opera to the classics. Now in his early 40s, Ryan was born in Cincinnati and raised in Louisville. He went into the Navy in 1951 and eventually was assigned to a Special Services entertainment division for an 18-month tour of duty in Japan. By the time he was discharged in 1954, he had decided to become an actor. He joined the Barter Theatre in Abingdon, Va., then gravitated to New York. There he had bit parts in 15 plays and got a running role in the daytime serial Dark Shadows.

Finally he scored in "Euripides," opposite Irene Papas, and went on to what he considers the high point of his stage career, playing Iago to James Earl Jones' Othello. A national tour of Eugene O'Neill's "A Moon for the Misbegotten" brought him to Los Angeles, where he landed his first movie role in "Monte Walsh." He has been part of the Hollywood scene ever since, in various movies and many of the action TV series. Jack Webb liked his work in an O'Hara, United States Treasury episode and cast him in Chase.

Ryan seems to enjoy his work in television and the life it has brought him—a home on four acres in miles-out, rural Agoura, Cal., where he and his wife Linda raise horses, dogs and cats. "It's real country, like Kentucky," he says. "It's like home."

For Wayne Maunder, who plays Sgt. Sam MacCray, Chase can either be a stepping stone to what he would like to be doing or else just another frustration added to those that have already marked his Hollywood career. That career has included two other flop TV series—Custer and Lancer—and a flop movie, "The Seven Minutes." What Maunder would like to be doing is comedy—but not too much of it. "I don't like to work this hard," he says. "I'd like to make a couple of TV movies a year, do some comedy and take it easy. I just want to have fun."

He has been trying, with limited success, to have fun during the 36 years of his life. Born in Canada and raised in Bangor, Maine, he first wanted to be a professional baseball player. When a few tryouts did not work out, he → went to California for a year at Compton Junior College, where he studied psychology and did a little acting on the side. A three-year Navy hitch followed, then two years studying with drama coach Stella Adler and appearing in mostly Shakespearean plays. He was in the same production of "Othello" as Mitchell Ryan. However, he was starring in "The Knack" on Long Island when he was spotted by a theatrical agent. Custer, Lancer, "The Seven Minutes" and frustration followed.

Maunder has found Chase frustrating, too. Early on, his role involved disguises and other slight changes of pace, but later he said, "My part has returned to the boring," and made noises about wanting to be fired. He talked the same way during Lancer's latter days, but a lot has happened to Wayne Maunder since then, most of it bad. After "The Seven Minutes," he says, "I finally gave up. I fired my agent and stayed home and played my guitar. When my money began to run out, I started selling the furniture."

A man with a wife and a 5-year-old son can exist only so long by the guitar alone. When Maunder had the chance to join Chase, he grabbed it. But he kept the guitar in his dressing room, and after the horseplay and the straight lines on the set, he generally fled there to be alone.

* * *

For Gary Crosby—Officer Ed Rice in Chase—the series is a chance for recognition as something besides Son of Celebrated Parent. Since Betty Hutton kissed him in "Star Spangled Rhythm" when he was 9 years old, he has been trying to make it as a singer, night-club performer, actor, what have you. His career, complicated by personal problems, has had more downs than ups. "Having a famous name can open a lot of doors, but it can close a lot, too," he says. Recently, except for occasional appearances in a running role in Adam-12, the doors have been closed. "Adam-12 was all I did for three years," Crosby says. "Jack Webb kept me alive."

This winter he was brought in to help breathe life into Jack Webb's Chase. Executive producer Cinader says, "He's sensational in the effect he has on other performers." Part of this is his easy-going manner, but more important is his smooth and self-assured professionalism. After half a lifetime as a rather rotund playboy, Gary Crosby today is an intense, slimmed-down (55 pounds less than his top weight) 40-year-old man who says, "I'm a serious actor. Now all I have to do is convince somebody else."

For Craig Gardner, Chase's Officer Tom Wilson, the show could be the proverbial Big Break. Twenty-three-year-old Gardner, a native of Santa Monica, Cal., quit college for show business after appearing in a number of campus musicals. Since then, he has been a member of a singing group, worked in Connie Stevens' night-club act, played a minor role in a Los Angeles production of "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," sung in musicals in Las Vegas and Long Beach, done a guest lead in Room 222, and held down a semiregular role in the soap opera The Young and the Restless.

"I was brought into the show for the young fans," Gardner says, "but my fans have always been older ladies who liked to mother me." He has tried to tone down his natural ebullience to fit what he sees as the serious nature of his role: "I've tried to underplay, like Steve McQueen or Michael Cole or Kent McCord. The comment I've had is that I always look as if I'm going to burst into song." Before doing a scene, he habitually said, "Tell me if I smile."

There may not be much to smile about where Chase is concerned, but Craig Gardner, Gary Crosby, Wayne Maunder and Mitchell Ryan are trying. Heaven knows they're trying. ☐

SHOULD IMPEACHMENT BE TELEVISED?

TV Guide polled the House and interviewed leaders. Here is what we found.

By Neil Hickey

Should television cameras be allowed into the House of Representatives to present full, live coverage if the House conducts impeachment proceedings against President Richard M. Nixon?

That question grows more important daily as the machinery of Congress moves toward what could be an impeachment debate in the House of Representatives later this summer. Never in history have the proceedings of Congress (except for State of the Union messages and occasional addresses by high dignitaries) been relayed by television, film or still cameras. So transcendent is the importance of an impeachment debate, however, that some congressmen are now eager to set aside that long-standing precedent and allow television in to cover it live. Others are firmly opposed.

To test the waters of Congressional opinion on this matter, TV GUIDE conducted a poll of the House of Representatives during several days in mid-May, and then followed up with personal interviews of a score of members in their offices. A questionnaire containing five questions was submitted to all 435 members of the House, in which they were invited to check off one of the following: Do you recommend the televising of impeachment proceedings? Are you opposed to televising these proceedings? Do you lean toward televising them? Do you lean away from televising them? Are you undecided? Also, we solicited brief essays from them of 100 words or less to support their views.

We obtained responses from 135 House members, or 31 per cent of the total membership. Their answers → broke down this way.

76 favor full TV coverage

23 are opposed

10 lean toward televising the debates

8 lean against it

18 are undecided

Thus, 64 per cent of our admittedly unscientific sample is either unequivocally for it or leaning that way; and 23 per cent is against it, or tending in that direction.

Among the 18 "undecideds," a general unanimity exists that's best expressed by Rep. John B. Anderson (R-Ill.), chairman of the House Republican Conference and third-ranking Republican in the House. "The pros and cons should be fully aired," says Representative Anderson—preferably at hearings before the House Rules Committee, which currently is in possession of a resolution (by Rep. Sidney R. Yates [D-Ill.] and 44 co-sponsors) favoring live TV coverage.

"I think the question is of such significance that members should be allowed to testify [before the Rules Committee] for and against televising the floor impeachment proceedings," Anderson told TV GUIDE, "and that network representatives should also be permitted to present their views and suggestions. If the hearings indicate there is considerable merit to allowing the televising of the proceedings, the resolution should be sent onto the House floor for debate and a vote."

As a practical matter, however, all such parliamentary procedure could be foreshortened simply by House Speaker Carl Albert and other House leaders declaring themselves in favor of a televised impeachment debate. The Rules of the House do not specifically exclude television cameras, but all House Speakers of the television era (starting with Speaker Sam Rayburn) have chosen to interpret that silence as exclusionary to television. Speaker Albert thus far has shown no tendency to interpret it otherwise.

Nor has the chairman of the House Rules Committee, Rep. Ray J. Madden (D-Ind.), indicated that he is in any hurry to schedule hearings on the Yates resolution. In an interview, Representative Madden said: "Before any decision can be made, we must await the outcome of the House Judiciary Committee's hearings [perhaps in late June], and if they vote to present a bill of impeachment to the full House, then we can go on from there." Madden sees certain "hazards" in full TV coverage, since all 435 House members "with few exceptions" will want to make a speech to be seen nation-wide and in their home districts. "That could tie up Congress for months."

Still, he sees "no great harm in televising it. People are entitled to hear the evidence firsthand."

The clearest and most influential voice heard thus far on the subject of TV-or-not-TV has been that of House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D-Mass.). And he's against it, in no uncertain terms. "A cast of 435 is a tremendously big cast" for any television show, he maintains. In a matter so grave as an impeachment, "you can't be getting signals from the television producer as to what is going to happen. For that reason I am opposed to television as far as the House is concerned."

Representative Yates, author of the pro-TV resolution (H. Res. 1028), sees the matter in a drastically different light. "This is the most historic issue of our time," he told us. "It's of such importance that all the material relating to it should be made available to the American people. This is their President, after all, who is under such very severe scrutiny."

The networks have assured him, he claims, that their coverage would be balanced, objective, unbiased, and largely unobtrusive. "I believe that if the American people actually see the House in action—see the arguments and reasoning of its members—it will help restore confidence in representative government."

He's convinced there will be no "Roman circus" atmosphere as some critics have predicted. The members are imbued with the solemnity and seriousness of the occasion, he says, and the debate will be conducted with the sort of dignity that will generate pride in the country and its institutions.

Yates and others are quick to rebut the argument that, since the House of Representatives in an impeachment debate is somewhat like a grand jury (which deliberates in secret), its debate ought not be televised. But impeachment proceedings are not secret—they point out—since newspaper journalists, the public and others are present in the 600 or so seats of the gallery. Legal counsel to the accused is also present, as he is not before grand juries. Finally, impeachment is not a criminal proceeding but rather a political and parliamentary remedy for perceived malfeasance. "Nobody can go to jail as the result of an impeachment proceeding," one congressman points out.

Fuel has been added to the controversy in recent weeks by a number of distinguished observers, among them James Reston of The New York Times, who is certain that "turning an impeachment debate and trial into a television spectacular . . . is the worst suggestion in broadcasting since the singing commercial"; and that to play out this drama "before the red eye of the camera"—knowing that it will be seen by Russians, Chinese and Europeans—is a "complicated nightmare."

Reston also worries that congressmen would be bombarded by millions of letters and telegrams threatening them with election defeat if they vote "this way or that."

The Washington Post hopped into the fray with an editorial on April 29 rejecting all arguments that "full television coverage will somehow fundamentally change the nature of the impeachment process." Congressmen are not so "publicity hungry that they would trifl with the most important responsibility which they may ever bear," said the Post.

The paper added: "It is hard to see how the national interest will be served if the deliberations on Capitol Hill are not transmitted fully and directly to the people."

For its own part, the television industry has declared itself ready and eager to transmit the House debate. In a letter to Representative Yates supporting his TV resolution, Arthur Taylor, president of CBS, Inc., said, "I can assure you positively" that the solemnity of any impeachment debate would be fully preserved should the House agree to grant television "equal status with the print press."

Against that background a large and opinionated sampling of the House of Representatives expressed themselves—pro, con and undecided—in TV GUIDE's poll. Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-N.Y.), for example, volunteered the following: "It's awfully important that the American people know that this thing was done fairly and thoroughly. Otherwise, we'll expose ourselves to greater criticism at a later date. In this national tragedy, we'll need as broad an acceptance as possible of our decision by the public. Full coverage would enlarge the number of people who will accept the outcome—whatever it may be."

Fish isn't worried, he says, about the expected flood of mail from constituents. "That's what we get paid for: to stand up to a little pressure."

Rep. Daniel D. Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) takes the opposing view. "Every one of us in the House is 'political,' and that animal in all of us will surface if each is allotted an amount of time to make a televised speech." Those members who didn't speak, Rostenkowski believes, would get letters from their dis-→ tricts saying: "I saw other congressmen speak; where were you?" He estimates that if every member spoke for only 15 minutes, it would still require 14 eight-hour days for those remarks alone—apart from the presentation of evidence.

He is "just one of those who believe that this is a judicious procedure," says Rostenkowski, "and in order for us to maintain a judicious atmosphere and to minimize the politics of it, it's best that we do not expose this."

His fellow Democrat, Rep. Edward Koch of New York, disagrees: "This is the most important measure to come before the House in the last 200 years," he insists. With regard to James Reston's concern that our "family affairs" will be paraded before the Russians and the Chinese, Koch says: "Reston apparently doesn't understand the cleansing process we have in this country. We do—in democratic fashion—what the Russians and the Chinese, who have closed societies, do by revolution and killing."

Rep. Delbert L. Latta (R-Ohio) also favors TV's presence: "Cheap grandstanding could be detected easily by the American people. The House itself would be on trial, with the people judging how we conduct our business."

In addition to the foregoing views (obtained in personal interviews), TV GUIDE's questionnaire tapped an unexpectedly strong current of opinion surging along beneath the surface of the House of Representatives—on every side of the TV question. In response to our request for a brief, written essay on the subject, Rep. Tom Steed (D-Oklahoma) minced no words in inscribing his conviction that "Politicians seem to react to TV like idiots"; and that the whole debate might devolve into a "Roman-holiday spectacle."

Rep. George A. Goodling (R-Pa.) foresees "no good that would result from televising the hearings." Participants should be "weighing their words rather than worrying about their ties being properly adjusted and every hair being in its designated place."

Rep. G. William Whitehurst (R-Va.) declares straight out that television's presence would be a "temptation to demagoguery on the part of certain members." He didn't name any names.

Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin (D-Cal.), on the other hand, says it's "no time to play games with the American people, or leave anything to chance or misunderstanding." The debate will be an ordeal for participants and onlookers alike, he insists, and thus live television could be an "urgently needed catharsis by making us all a part of the proceedings."

Rep. Joseph E. Karth (D-Minn.) says forthrightly that "Barnum & Bailey has the circus," and thus a similar entertainment is not needed in the House of Representatives. "Televising [the impeachment debate] would provide a circus atmosphere and undoubtedly prolong the process. This is serious business . . ."

Democratic representative Walter E. Fauntroy, a nonvoting delegate from the District of Columbia, confronts yet another aspect of the controversy; namely, whether or not the nation-wide publicity of a televised impeachment debate would endanger indictment (as well as the rights of defendant) in related court cases yet to be heard. He is confident, he says, that the House can create safeguards against that, but—even if a few pending prosecutions are undermined—the public's right to observe an impeachment debate still ought not to be compromised.

And so the discussion goes. The outcome will be known in the weeks just ahead, and will constitute an important precedent for American journalism in its future handling of the Congress of the United States. And it could provide us with one of the most dramatic television presentations in the history of the medium. END

NEW BLUE CROSS MAJOR MEDICAL PLAN FOR INDIVIDUALS

For the first time, the Blue Cross plan is offering Major Medical protection to individuals under 65 years of age who are not members of a group plan.

This new expanded plan includes a broad program of hospital, professional and medical benefits to give you even greater security. It's a total package that gives you, and each member of your family, $250,000 of health care protection. This is the best and most comprehensive plan we've ever offered to individuals.

Nobody is more aware of the advances in medical care—and the expenses involved—than we are at the Blue Cross plan. Introducing this broad new Major Medical protection is just another example of how we're continually responding to these advances and the constantly changing health care needs of modern Californians.

To save you time and money, we've designed this new plan with simplicity in mind. It's simple to understand. And because it's simple to administer, we've eliminated unnecessary paperwork.

If you're not a member and want to find out how you can qualify for this great new Major Medical plan, just send us the coupon. Or call your nearest Blue Cross office.

CHEERS, JEERS FOR PODUNK

I agree with what the people in Podunk, Mass., said about TV ["What Do They Think of Television in Podunk?" May 4]. I disagree with Mr. Pin Stripe No. 1, the network executive who said, "If they (Americans) wanted quality, we'd give them quality." It's a shame that network executives who have the say as to what goes on the TV screen, aren't more informed as to what people would like to see. What the American public—in my part of the country, at least—seems to be buying on TV are the human-interest stories.

Ursula Picariello
Fair Lawn, N.J.

[So are the network executives. Wait 'till you see what's on next fall.—Ed.]

Three cheers for Podunk. I don't know where New Yorkers get the idea that they have a monopoly on intelligence, culture, good taste or anything else.

TO PAY OR NOT TO PAY

I am for a pay-TV service, even though I am retired and making less than $300 per month ["A Debate: The Issue of Pay-TV," May 4]. I would be glad to pay if I could see something worth watching.

George N. Dykes Jr.

Free television should continue as free radio has. It is a real joy and pleasure—including the commercials.

Dorothy Rummel
St. Louis

I found it refreshing to read two semiliterate articles on the issue of pay-TV in one magazine. There is just one little thing I would like to point out to Vincent T. Wasilewski: there is no such thing as free TV. As long as I have to sit through six to 10 minutes per hour of "words from our sponsor," I am not getting anything free. The possibility of programming that avoids "words from our sponsor" and "important messages" is a commodity for which there is a market—in this case, pay-TV. Face it, pay television is here to stay.

BRAVOS AND BOOS FOR "NEWS WATCH"

I would like to commend you for "News Watch." It is time that someone held TV news broadcasters accountable for accuracy, fairness and balance.

We've given your "News Watch" columns a few weeks, and find them shamefully partisan. They are an almost desperate attempt on your part to court what you think are the sympathies of us "middle Americans." You're wrong.

IMPEACHMENT ISN'T ENTERTAINMENT

John P. Roche's article "The Case for Televising Impeachment" ["News Watch," May 4] completely misses the mark. The framers of the Constitution never intended that an impeachment be—in Roche's words—"a trial by public opinion." The impeachment process involves the presentation of evidence to be considered judiciously. There is absolutely no way that evidence can compete with hearsay and innuendo if the proceedings are beamed into every living room in the land. With each of the 435 members of the House of Representatives—all up for election this fall—vying for his moment of glory on nation-wide TV, the hearings would take on an aura of a Roman circus; or a combination of Wide World of Sports and Let's Make A Deal.

Prime of Miss Jean Brodie has its prime-time premiere this week and "The World of Henry Orient" is back after five years to add more than a touch of class to the season.

The 1969 film version of Muriel Spark's brilliant novel, adapted by Jay C. Sarson Allen and directed by Ronald Neame, is a tragic-comedy set in the sadder-toned bleakness of a conservative school and a tradition-bound society in Edinburgh in the '30s. Its central figure, Miss Brodie, is a brilliant-hued chameleonlike woman blazing a path to her own destruction and leaving not a bystander unsinged along the way. Maggie Smith, who deservedly won a best-actress Oscar for her role, is superb as the spinster teacher, a romantic tyrant, a woman of delusion who imposes her illusions upon others in the guise of putting "old heads on young shoulders." "Give me a girl at an impressionable age," she declares, "and she is mine for life." And the girls of "the Brodie" attest to it. An excellent cast supports Miss Smith superbly but the real honors are hers.

Not merely in contrast, the week's other premiere, You Can't Win 'Em All, is trite and tired fare. A dull Leo V. Jordon script puts Tony Curtis and Charles Bronson into the roles of adventurers in Turkey in the mid '20s and their frenetic direction nor authentic tales make them worth watching. But there's The World of Henry Orient on its third go-round—and you can relive again in this delightful 1964 delineation of the agonies and ecstasies, the laughter and the lump-in-the-throat of teen-age girlhood by George Roy Hill, the fine director whose current work is, of course, "The Sting." Tippy Walker and Merrie Spaeth are the adolescents; Angela Lansbury, Peter Sellers, Paula Prentiss, Tom Bosley and Bibi Osterwald are some of the adults they're involved with; and all are superb, with glorious New York backgrounds as their playground.

A third run of 1968's No Way to Treat a Lady offers fine cops-and-killer fun with Rod Steiger as a multifaceted (and faceted) lady-killer and George Segal as a nice mama-burdened cop. But a second repeat of 1971's The Anderson Tapes points out that the parts are better than the whole of this wire-tap-oriented robbery-caper tale that does, however, come to a smashing conclusion.

Two of the six tailored-for-television flicks being repeated this week are well worth the watching: Bloodsport, written and directed by Jerrold Freedman, a perceptive story of a high-school boy football-pressured by his father and coach; and Crime Club, a series pilot with Lloyd Bridges dandy as a private eye. But Live Again, Die Again (mommy's back from 34 years in a deep freeze), Climb an Angry Mountain (silly meller around beautiful Mt. Shasta), Sidekicks (a predictable one-joker) and What Are Best Friends For? (a sexless, laughless sex comedy) don't improve with repetition.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

Presenting Disney's WONDERFUL the perfect reading program

The magic of Disney in all-new easy-to-read books will make reading fun for your child!

What a wonderful idea—to let your child's favorite Disney pals help him take a giant step into the WONDERFUL WORLD OF READING. And who but Disney's beloved characters with all their delightful antics could offer your child so many happy reasons to read on his own? That's why Walt Disney Productions, together with Random House, have created this all-new program of big, colorful, easy-to-read children's books.

Yes, now your 4-to-8 year old can discover how much fun it is to read on his own while he and Bambi wander through the animal kingdom to find out why otters slide, but birds glide. While he and three good fairies help a prince find the Sleeping Beauty. And while he and Robin Hood outfox a wicked prince and make off with the royal gold. All the time his reading skills will be growing naturally, because he enjoys every fascinating, care-free moment of it.

To introduce your youngster to the WONDERFUL WORLD OF READING we'd like to send you the 3 books shown here for free examination. If you decide to keep them you pay only $1.95 for all 3, plus delivery, instead of the publisher's regular price of $7.50.

As a member of the program your child will receive a package from the postman each month, with his own name on it, and with an all-new, easy-to-read Disney book inside! But you need not buy even one additional book, because you may cancel membership at any time. For each book you decide to keep you'll be billed only $1.95 plus delivery—and continue to save on the retail price of $2.50 per book.

Send for these 3 all-new Disney books and see how all the Disney friends your child loves and trusts help him to read with more confidence and fun! Remember, you and your child must be delighted with all 3 books or you may return them within 14 days and owe nothing. You risk nothing—and your youngster stands to gain a world of pleasure. So mail the attached order form today!

JUNGLE CAT

Graceful, self-reliant and fearless, the jaguar is lord of the Amazonian rain forest.

This documentary explores the jaguar's world, centering on a 275-pound black male, his mate (which has the more common spotted fur) and their two cubs.

Finding food is a primary concern in the jungle, and the cats use a definite hunting plan. Working as a team, the adult jaguars stalk their prey, such as a boa constrictor and a jacare (a South American crocodile). When one cat tires during the struggle, the other goes in as a replacement.

To the cubs belong the lighter moments of the film, including their swimming lessons and a mini-hunt—for parakeets.

Three cameramen spent two years making the movie, which was released theatrically in 1960. (Repeat; 60 min.)

Soft-pedal your fat away!

...with our easy-going cycle exerciser

HELPS ...

- PULL IN YOUR STOMACH
- SLIM YOUR WAISTLINE
- FIRM YOUR THIGHS
- TRIM YOUR HIPS

Why work hard for a slimmer, trimmer figure—when this easy, relaxed way will do the trick a lot more pleasantly! Our fun-slanted Cycle Exerciser lets you lie down, stretch out, and gently pedal away those inches in comfort!

Cycle Exerciser makes the job fun . . . because you don't even have to think about the work you're doing. Just stretch out on the comfortable full-length vinyl mat, and go through the motions—indoors or out—while you're watching TV, sunbathing, or even keeping time to music on stereo or radio. A few minutes of pedalling a day helps invigorate you, and tone your muscles as you slim down . . . so you can stretch out the time, day by day, as the flab melts away!

Moving parts are rugged chromed steel. Easy-to-carry unit folds to a compact 28" x 20" x 1 1/4" for storage.

Significant savings on exclusive Distinction® Deluxe Stainless by Oneida Ltd. Silversmiths ...only from Homeward House.

Here's the beautiful stainless you've dreamed of owning—7 magnificent pieces valued at over $13.00—all yours for only $1. Don't confuse this with off-brand, lightweight stainless—this is exquisite quality, made by Oneida Ltd. Silversmiths—America's largest producer of fine stainless.

Why this fabulous $1 introductory offer?

We want to send this magnificent stainless direct to your home—so you can appreciate the exquisite craftsmanship and unique value you get through the exclusive Homeward House plan. For just $1, you get:

1 Deluxe Dinner Knife, 1 Dinner Fork, 1 Salad Fork, 1 Soup Spoon, 1 Teaspoon, 1 Iced Drink Spoon, 1 Seafood Fork. 7 magnificent pieces! Worth over $13.00! Yours for $1!

Yes, you get a complete 7-piece place setting—not just 5 as in ordinary sets.

Not for sale in any store—at any price!

Even in the finest stores, you won't find this elegant Distinction® Deluxe Stainless—it's simply not available in any store—anywhere—at any price. That's because Distinction Deluxe is created exclusively for Homeward House by the same master artisans who design Oneida's finest sterling. Knives are heavyweight yet perfectly balanced, with hollow handles and serrated blades . . . forks and spoons have perfectly finished edges. It's luxurious enough for formal dining, yet practical enough for everyday use . . . completely dishwasher safe!

Just the start of significant savings.

When your introductory place setting arrives, compare it with settings of similar fine quality—priced at $13.00 or more—and check your savings. You'll receive another identical 7-piece place setting automatically, about once a month, plus at holiday time, an elegant serving set . . . ideal for gift giving or year-round enjoyment. Each shipment is sent on approval. You pay only after you decide to keep it. Cancel any time after examining your introductory setting. Best of all, you may keep each additional shipment for the low Homeward House price of just $5.98 plus shipping and handling. Complete open stock available as with all fine stainless. And you can even add to your set through outstanding supplementary offers.

Choose from two exclusive patterns.

Get started now. Choose Capri—a dramatic Mediterranean pattern with raised floral scroll-work highlighting the antiqued accent panel . . . or Kennett Square—a lavishly traditional motif with a delicate floral design. Mail the coupon today with just $1 to start your set of Distinction Deluxe Stainless by Oneida Ltd. Silversmiths.

A stainless collection that fits your lifestyle.

This exclusive Homeward House plan lets you customize your stainless collection to fit the size of your family and the way you entertain. No need to buy 50, 60 or 70 piece sets at substantial lump-sum retail prices. Through this exclusive new plan, you alone determine the number of settings you want. What could be more sensible!

Answers to your questions about the Homeward House Plan.

Q. How many place settings must I purchase?

A. You have no obligation to purchase any minimum number of place settings. Take as many or as few as you want—the decision is yours.

Q. When a place setting arrives, do I have to keep it?

A. Each place setting is sent to you on approval—that means you pay only after you decide you want to keep it. If, for some reason, you do not wish to keep any place setting, simply return it.

Q. How much will future place settings cost me?

A. As a member of the Homeward House Plan, you pay only $5.98 plus shipping and handling for each 7-piece place setting you choose to keep.

Q. What if I want to complete my set sooner?

A. After you've received your introductory place setting and seen what a fabulous value it really is, you may want to complete your set sooner . . . and you can! You'll be able to order as many place settings as you desire at once for immediate shipment—and save money too! Complete open stock available through Homeward House.

Q. What about extra serving pieces? Can I order them?

A. As a bonus to Homeward House members, you'll have the opportunity to order beautiful matching serving pieces in money-saving groupings. You'll be able to order such gracious serving pieces as:

Pastry Server	Pierced Serving Spoon
Gravy Ladle	Butter Knife
Serving Fork	Sugar Spoon

Dear Friend:

I'm puzzled. If your favorite department store offered you an elegant 7-piece place setting by Oneida Ltd. Silversmiths for only $1, wouldn't you accept it? Of course you would. And that's exactly what we're offering you right now.

But many women will pass up this chance. Frankly, this "gimmick" and you'll be obligated to buy more settings later.

Let me reassure you that you're under no obligation to buy another thing ever -- you may cancel at any time after examining your introductory setting.

If you decide you don't want to receive any more place settings, simply return any shipment or cancel your Homeward House membership. That will end the matter. You won't receive any "pleading" letters and nobody will call you on the telephone. The luxurious introductory place setting for just $1 is yours to keep and use, whatever you decide.

Sincerely,

Anne Davis

Special: The rising cost of food—and the changing demands for it.

This hour was still being edited at press time, but according to senior producer John Sharnik, it will deal with the "whole framework of the food problem. The astonishing increase in prices is only one manifestation. It is the worldwide competition for food that the American consumer is caught up in."

To illustrate his point, Sharnik examines how more American-grown food is being "drained and tapped" abroad because "grain-eating and pork-eating countries have now acquired a taste for beef."

In the U.S., cameras trace what Sharnik calls the "complicated and highly vulnerable" food chain—from farmer to middleman to shopper. How the price crunch has affected middle-income shoppers is depicted in a portrait of a Los Angeles family of four, forced to tighten their belts as well as their budget.

12 JACQUES COUSTEAU

Special: Critics called "Octopus, Octopus" one of Cousteau's best shows; it also attracted his largest audience. In Pacific and Mediterranean waters, Cousteau and his cameras show the octopus to be shy, courageously protective of its young, and definitely not ferocious: when approached by a diver, an octopus usually tries to scoot away. Sequences include an octopus intelligence test (it takes three hours for one to figure out how to get a lobster out of a corked container); a sensitive mating ritual; and scenes of a mother vigorously defending her eggs. Cousteau also offers notes on the housing shortage for these creatures as two octopuses battle to settle in a ceramic pot on the sea floor. Rod Serling narrates the 1971 documentary. A MUSICAL-COMEDY HOUR

Debut: The Grammy Award-winning singer is the hostess for a four-week series.

Robert Goulet and Wayne Newton are opening-night guests, joining Bobbie in a musical salute to the Old South. Songs: "Alabama Bound," "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," "Rock-a-Bye Your Baby with a Dixie Melody" and "Mame."

There's also nostalgia from the '50s, a blend of comedy and music as Bobbie sings a medley of Elvis Presley hits and joins Wayne for "Bye, Bye Love," à la the Everly Brothers.

In solos, Bobbie sings "What'll I Do?" and Robert, "On a Clear Day."

Series regulars: nightclub performer Michael Greer and, making their U.S. TV debuts, Canadian entertainers Valri Bromfield and Earl Pomerantz. (60 min.)

THE WORLD OF HENRY ORIENT

Peter Sellers, Tippy Walker, Merrie Spaeth

Some films of late have dealt with the seamier side of New York, but in 1964 comedy two 14-year-old girls take Manhattan into a playground.

The movie is an affectionate ode to youth and a salute to Fun City, unfolding in a story about young Valerie's and Marian's crush on a concert pianist named Henry Orient. The pursuit and bevelilment of Henry take the girls on a romantic odyssey from the waterfalls through Central Park to Washington Square.

Hollywood veteran Nunnally Johnson collaborated on the screenplay with his daughter Nora, who wrote the novel on which the film is based. Directed by George Roy Hill, this year's Oscar-winner for "The Sting." (Repeat; 2 hrs.)

THE PRIME OF MISS JEAN BRODIE

Maggie Smith's Oscar-winning performance dominates this 1969 film. She plays the title character, a vain, eccentric schoolteacher in Scotland of the 1930s. Doting her favorite pupils with romantic, often naive ideas on art and politics, Miss Brodie loves the schoolgirls—and enrages their prim headmistress—by having affairs with two hooligans.

The movie unfolds as a series of vignettes, linked by Miss Smith's complex portrait of a woman at once fiercely independent and bold, yet unwittingly cruel and insensitive. Jay Presson Allen based her screenplay (and 1966 stage production) on Muriel Spark's novel.

COOLING THE SUMMER WITH LAUGHTER

Debut: New comic talent is showcased in this 10-week summer series.

Producer Greg Garrison: "Our aim is to scout nightclubs and campuses across the country and in London for the freshest and most genuinely funny acts available, and to tape them on location."

At press time, the series opener was still being edited, but viewers can expect to see six to eight new faces. There is also comedy by regulars Rodney Dangerfield and an improvisational group, the Committee; and a nostalgic touch is added to each show by film clips of Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton, and Laurel and Hardy.

Introducing the acts: hosts Jackie Cooper, Barbara Feldon and Nipsey Russell. (60 min.)

"If you're in the habit of calling Long Distance Sunday evenings, you're losing money."

I'm Bill Russell for your phone company with another way to save money on interstate Long Distance calls.

You already know Rule 1—put 'em through yourself (like I did in those fancy shots on television). Dial direct from your home or office.

Rule 2 is to know when to call.

Take a 3-minute call on weekends, for instance.

Saturdays, you save the most if you call between 8 in the morning and 11 at night.

But Sundays, you save from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. After 5 p.m. on Sunday, the rates go up!

Check out the cost comparisons yourself in the front of your phone book.

So remember. When it comes to saving money on Long Distance, we hear you. That's why we want you to know when to call and how to call.

And you can't miss with Long Distance!

Long Distance is the next best thing to being there.

"Here comes the tap dance across the mine field," said co-producer Chris Beardie, about to go on stage to talk to the 342 people assembled in Studio 31 at CBS Television City, Hollywood. "This is the hardest thing I've ever had to do. Wish me luck."

The "concert" portion of The Sonny & Cher Comedy Hour was about to begin, with Beardie's warm-up chitchat with the audience. It was the 25th time the show had been taped this season. Nothing about it looked different.

It was the final Comedy Hour for the '73-74 season. But that would normally occasion a puff of pride, not a pang of anxiety. The show, which CBS later announced will not be on again next season, had been lodged among the Top 10 in the Nielsen ratings for many weeks. The renewal of such a winner for another season would seem to be beyond question.

But 58 hours earlier, in Los Angeles County Superior Court, Salvatore Bono, 39, had filed for legal separation from his wife of nine years, Cherilyn LaPiere Bono, 27. Now, for the first time, they would face an audience as something less than the inextricably melded, one-word Sonny-and-Cher.

Chris Beardie bounded on stage and into the spotlight. He took a deep breath. "I know what you're all asking yourselves," he began. "What's he going to say tonight?" Well, I'm thinking exactly what you are. It's sad about some of the things that have been happening." Pause. "Everybody has problems—and everybody deserves the chance to work them out. What about Sonny and Cher's? They're going to be out here in a minute and you can decide for yourselves. You're going to see a lot of love on this stage. Thank you."

Tape was rolling and Sonny and Cher were suddenly on and into a rollicking duet of "Beautiful Sunday." The audience response was tumultuous. A musician said, "I've never seen them work so well together. We should all have problems like they got."

It was a playground, not a mine field. The same old playground. The jokes as ever before. Sonny: "There's something I want to get off my chest, Cher . . . and onto yours." Sonny pleads for a new bed. He's tired of climbing into the upper bunk. Cher: "You'd need a ladder to climb into a lower bunk." The audience lapped it up, as ever before.

The final finale was, appropriately, Sonny's original love song to Cher: "I Got You, Babe," belted out con brio and con amore.

The Party's Over

Sonny and Cher's last show was taped in an atmosphere of desperate optimism

By Rowland Barber

The taping over, Cher went her way, with her dwindling entourage, and Sonny went his, alone, and all the unanswered questions hung in the air in the empty studio.

The next day—Friday—was wrap-up day, getaway day, last-chance-for-answers day. That night the Sonny & Cher company would be flying to Houston to perform before four huge crowds at the Astrodome. Meantime, the comedy sketches—too complicated and time-consuming to tape before an audience—had to be finished.

Nobody talked about it. Business as usual, on the set. Director Art Fisher's voice booming out of the control room. Sonny the class cutup, disrupting the march of progress with his outrageous non sequiturs. Cher topping him with her wry, throwaway asides. Joel Grey, the guest star, singing, dancing, mugging his way through 12 elaborate scene and costume changes.

Cher is doing her Vamp number atop Sonny's upright ragtime piano. All goes well, until Sonny stops batting the keyboard and announces: "I didn't use my deodorant today and I may not admonishment rest there. She proceeds to drop a wad of pizza dough over cast-member Teddy Zeigler's head, like a glutinous cloche. While Hairdresser and Make-up rehabilitate Zeigler, the voice of Fisher pleads: "May we have some semblance of order on the set—please? We're running late . . ."

"Last-show jitters," says one of the camera crew. Somebody corrects him. "Last-show-of-the-season jitters," he says, hopefully.

Lunch break, an hour overdue. In use it tomorrow!" Fisher: "All right—cut." Cher: "It's not like you to screw up a taping, Sonny. You a new boy here?" Unidentified voice from behind a camera: "Let's bring in the little blonde kid in case we have any more problems." The reference to Sonny and Cher's daughter Chastity brings nervous laughter, then a rare moment of silence on the set.

Rehearsing the "Sonny's Pizza" scene, waitress Cher plops a pizza down at Sonny and Joel's table. Sonny: "Don't use the real props for rehearsal, Cher. We still have to shoot it." Cher: "It's already dead." Cher does not let the her dressing room Cher has taken off her costume—except for the floozy wig, which she has forgotten about—and slipped, barefoot, into a terry-cloth robe. She curls up on a sofa.

"Why are people so afraid to talk to me?" she begins. "I want to talk. About everything that's happening. And—should I say this?—I've never felt better! Wasn't last night, the concert taping, terrific? Before it started I was nervous, Sonny was nervous, and the audience was nervous, because of this thing Sonny did Tuesday morning—→

You'd think the show would be affected. But no—it came together just like it does every time we go on, maybe even better.

"This thing we're going through. I remember once telling Son, 'Divorce is a positive thing.' And it is. If two people have been loving each other for years, they don't suddenly start hating each other. It's just not good for us to be together any more. We've stopped needing each other like we used to. Because I respect Sonny, I'm able to release him, to go on to another level. And he can do the same with me.

"It's strange. Here I love Son so much, and yet I have to leave him. Do you think people will understand? America always puts divorce down as failure. Well, there's no need to glamorize it—but we can understand it, in terms of love and respect and needs. In my case, it's a necessary step in my growing up.

"Remember," she said, "when Sonny first took me over, and married me, I was only 17, and he had to take care of every detail of my life. Shelter me, protect me, around the clock. I was lonely. I was shy. I had absolutely no confidence. Son brought me up with a whole new set of values, things I'd never had a chance to learn before. He was more of a mother to me than my own mother, if you know what I mean.

"But now I have to break out. And Sonny's not willing to make the transition with me. He's always been used to Cher's being one way, and no other way. It's doing this show that's changed me. It was my first chance at really being a 50-50 partner with Sonny.

"If nothing else ever happened to me, I'd have this high point of my life to look back on. For two years doing what I've had the most fun doing ever since I was a little kid—putting on pretty clothes and acting silly . . ."

She touched her head, reflexively, felt the Sadie Thompson wig, and chuckled. "The first time Son and I saw each other this week, after he filed the separation papers, we had to come in on Wednesday to prerecord the musical numbers. I came down one corridor one way, Sonny down the other way. We stand there facing each other—like 'High Noon,' you know? And then we bust out laughing!

"If I had my way, I would have told CBS to make our last show a Divorce Show. Go on camera and lay it on the line, then do our thing like we've always done it, and let America know there's still love here, and always will be.

"I have no idea what Sonny will tell you, but I know he'll be honest."

In his dressing room, across the wide "High Noon" corridor from Cher's, Sonny was showing off his newest toy: an electric espresso maker. "Nothing like good strong Italian coffee," he said. "Maybe it'll make a good strong Italian out of me."

Sonny calls himself a "born optimist." His cool-headed, step-by-step, first-things-first management of the Bonos' career has made their good luck possible. What of their future now?

"Our future begins tomorrow, with the rodeo at the Astrodome. I don't know what Cher's doing, but after that I'm taking a little vacation."

He sipped at the bitter coffee for a moment. "Separation sure is different when you're publicly known people. A hell of a lot more difficult. I think it's big of Cher and myself to go out there and say, 'Hey, we have some problems.' Those things are generally very private affairs. But when you're out there like we will be in front of 107,000 people this weekend, those people are going to look up at you and know you have relationship problems. Of course it affects them. It affects us on stage—can't help it. But you saw the taping with the audience last night. There was more warmth than ever before between them and us.

"Honesty is the only way. To hide things under the carpet and deny them is so wrong. It dissipates you, creeps → into your blood, eats away at you, to hang on to a lie."

I asked Sonny about his personal future. "Last summer," he recalled, "I was up for a part in 'Godfather II.' Well, I missed out on that, and I really wanted it. Now I've just missed a part in 'Earthquake.' They decided the character should be a black man. So I'm still trying. It's the one thing in the world I want most to do—be a movie actor."

His dresser had come in to help him change costume. Sonny paused, with one pants leg at half-mast, and his face broke into a beamish grin. "I'm really proud of the way our show has matured," he said, then continued, without the slightest trace of wistfulness or irony: "The Sonny and Cher combination really works now. We're still having fun, still helping each other with the ad-libs and the timing on stage, still helping each other off stage. We're still magic. . . ."

The last scene of the last show to be taped has "Culture Reporter" Freeman King, man-of-all-parts of the show's company, sitting in an armchair, complete with pipe and tuxedo. Take after take after take is started, and stopped—because Sonny is monomaniacally determined to break up King. "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen—" Sonny (off stage): "Your big chance, Freeman—don't blow it!" Fisher: "Cut! Tape is still rolling. From the top." "Good evening, ladies and bleepers—stop kicking my chair, Sonny!" "Cut." Now Freeman breaks himself up: "Ladies and gentiles—ah, bleep . . . will you please get Sonny off the set, or tie him up?"

It has gone beyond the old "stay loose on the set" fun-and-games. The pattern has become transparent. Sonny simply does not want the taping to end. King's equanimity is wearing thin. Seventh take, seventh vocal-jab interruption. King has had enough. After a beat of total silence on the set, he utters the ultimate putdown. "Sonny," he says, "how's your marriage?"

Two beats of silence. Then Sonny says quietly: "Just as good as your acting, Freeman."

That did it. The charge that had been building up in the studio all week was detonated. It wasn't funny, really, but it had finally been voiced. The whole set broke up. Thigh-slapping, floor-pounding laughter capped with a thunderburst of applause. The sorely needed catharsis.

And that was, emotionally, the end of The Sonny & Cher Comedy Hour. After the Sonny-Freeman exchange, a cold draft seemed to invade the studio. They went through the motions of the sketch. There were technical problems. More technical problems.

A take was finished that seemed to be OK. Everyone turned toward the curtained booth beyond the seats, waiting for confirmation. Then Art Fisher's voice, without inflection: "That was a 'buy.' Strike the set. Thank you very much, Joel Grey, for being our guest this week." Pause. "Thank you, Sonny and Cher." Another pause. "Please strip the stage, gentlemen. Everything goes."

Thus, at 6:25 P.M., PDT, Feb. 22, 1974, it was all over.

At 7 o'clock two stagehands were skimming a Frisbee back and forth in the corridor outside Studio 31. That was the only action anywhere in sight.

A few weeks later, Cher Bono filed for divorce from Sonny and sued to have their working contract voided. She let it be known that she was weighing offers to star in movies. Bono watchers said it was too bad, but Sonny would never make it as a single. Then ABC announced that it had scheduled a weekly Sonny Comedy Revue for the fall.

But all of this was only aftershock—a mandatory but somehow meaningless epilogue to the story that had ended with the silent flight of the Frisbee. END

DO IT. ONE WAY OR THE OTHER.

Up to now, you probably wouldn't color your hair if they paid you to do it. Because you were afraid of what coloring could do to your hair.

Now you can do it. Because now there's Clairol® Balsam Color. The shampoo-in hair-color that leaves no excuse for not coloring your hair.

It leaves your hair looking healthy, soft, conditioned. In fact, it leaves your hair shiny and more manageable than if you hadn't colored it.

You see, you add our packette of Balsam Color conditioners to the color. And your hair absorbs the conditioners where it needs it the most—like the ends. So your hair's more natural. And the color keeps looking natural. Because of a special new longer-wear formula.

Hurry up and do it. Which-ever way you want to do it. (Get 25¢ off now at your drug store, food store or any-place haircoloring is sold, or get $1.00 back later from us in the mail.)

Simple & Savory— Sausage

continued

The simpler the party, the more time for the hostess to enjoy herself. Richly flavored sausage plus ice-cold beer make a perfect combination for easy entertaining.

Kielbasa and Potatoes (pictured)

Serves 6

8 slices thick-sliced bacon, diced	1 Polish kielbasa or 2 lbs.
2 large onions, chopped	Italian sweet sausage
6 large potatoes, cooked, peeled and cut into 1-inch cubes	2 red bell peppers, cut into 1-inch squares
	Salt and pepper

In a large skillet, fry bacon until brown and crisp. Remove and set aside. Add onion to drippings and saute until golden brown. Add potato cubes and stir over low heat until potatoes are lightly browned, about 15 minutes. Cook kielbasa in boiling salted water for 15 minutes. Drain and cut into $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch slices. If using sausages, brown on all sides in another skillet; cut into 1-inch slices. Add kielbasa or sausages to potatoes. Add red peppers and stir over low heat for another 10 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pile on a serving platter and sprinkle with reserved crisp bacon. Serve with marinated sliced cucumbers, slices of dark bread and glasses of cold beer.

Sausages and Sauerkraut Cooked in Beer

Serves 6

2 lbs. sauerkraut, well drained	2 tsp. caraway seeds
1 can (12 ounces) light beer	6 knackwurst or 1 pound
1 large onion, chopped	cocktail franks
1 apple, cored and chopped

In a large saucepan combine sauerkraut, beer, onion, apple, and caraway seeds. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Add knackwurst (or cocktail franks), cover and simmer another 15 minutes. Serve with sliced tomatoes, tossed green salad, rye bread slices and cold beer.

Oven-Barbecued Frankfurters

Serves 6

12 frankfurters or bratwurst	$\frac{1}{4}$ tsp. Tabasco
1 bottle (12 oz.) chili sauce	1 cup light beer
$\frac{1}{2}$ cup well-drained pickle relish	2 cans (15 $\frac{1}{4}$ oz. each)
2 tbsp. prepared mustard	kidney beans, drained

Combine all ingredients in a 9x13x2-inch baking pan. Stir to blend well. Bake uncovered in a preheated moderate oven (350°F.) for 40 to 45 minutes or until bubbly. Bake small Idaho potatoes in the oven at the same time and serve them with the barbecued frankfurters. To make the best use of the energy required to heat oven, add slices of crusty garlic bread and a casserole of squash slices. Serve with cold beer.

Vivian Welton in action.

"I would personally like to choke them!"

Believe it or not, that angry exclamation comes from America's Sweetheart, Carol Burnett. Why the uncharacteristically caustic comment? Because the people who arouse her ire make a living by selling thousands of Los Angeles tourists exact directions to her home.

Their business signs are a familiar part of the Los Angeles landscape. You drive along the wide, gracefully winding Sunset Boulevard—past the ivy-covered walls and broad, sloping lawns leading to stately Tudor mansions and sprawling Spanish ranch houses—when suddenly, in startling contrast to the lush, leafy landscape, you see the bright yellow signs: "MOVIE MAPS."

Those signs have dotted the neighborhood since 1936, when a candy manufacturer named Wesley Lake decided to have his candy salesmen try their hands at also selling maps. Ironically, the original inspiration for the maps came from the first American Sweetheart, Mary Pickford. During World War I she encouraged stars to follow her practice of giving → free coffee and doughnuts to soldiers at her home. As the list of stars grew, a map of their homes was made. When the war ended, the chamber of commerce took the idea from there and began handing out free maps at the Arizona-California border. Until Lake spied the potential for profit, then the chamber of commerce bowed out, and the map business was born.

Today, Lake's daughter, a middle-aged lady named Vivian Welton, runs that business from the same Bel-Air corner that her father placed salesmen on years ago. Sitting in a green folding beach chair, looking across Sunset at the pink stucco walls of Jayne Mansfield's last home, she patiently leafs through magazine recipes until a tourist's car appears. Then she stands up, clears her throat, and goes into a split-second spiel for the "Souvenir Map and Guide to Starland Estates and Mansions" that would make any sideshow barker proud. "Andy-Williams-is-on-Delfern-and-in-Bel-Air-there's-Zsa-Zsa-Gabor-Jerry-Lewis-Sonny-and-Cher-bought-Tony-Curtis's-million-dollar-home-Herb-Alpert-Julie-Andrews-Sammy-Davis-Jr.-Dean-Martin-that's-a-beautiful-place-on-Copa-de-Ora-Elvis-Presley's-new-address-is-just-off . . ."

With that sales pitch, Mrs. Welton can sell over 1000 maps a year at $4 each. But she doesn't stop there. She also sells her copyrighted maps wholesale to others, who, curiously, have been known to sell them for less than her price. In Hollywood, a battalion of teenage boys, employed by a high school math teacher who himself sold maps at age 14, stand on corners with huge sign boards, waving wildly at passing cars.

And two blocks from Mrs. Welton's corner, 76-year-old Frances Ward, her white hair peeking out from under a wide-brimmed straw hat, sits in the sun, selling maps as she has for the past 20 years. In that time, Mrs. Ward and her hat have become genuine Hollywood landmarks. So much so that Elvis Presley, who often drives by in his huge black limousine, has nicknamed her "Sunset Annie." On a good summer day, Sunset Annie, Mrs. Welton and the teen-age boys may send as many as 185 cars out to roam the streets of Bel-Air and Beverly Hills, searching for the homes marked by red stars on the map.

Where does Mrs. Welton get all those closely guarded addresses? The Beverly Hills City Directory, a little-known city publication that lists residents' names and addresses, is one place. Trade-paper and gossip-column items also help. But surprisingly, neighbors, mailmen and children on bikes are the best sources of all. Once a neighbor just walked up to Mrs. Welton and volunteered the address of the palatial English Tudor home into which Dean Martin had just moved.

And it can be even easier than that. Johnny Carson has fans continually ringing the bell on the gate to his 2½-acre estate. "It's such a nuisance," he complains. "I'd love to know how they got my address to begin with!" That was simple. One night on his show a guest asked if it were true that Carson had bought Mervyn LeRoy's house, which used to be on the tourist map. And Johnny said, "Yes."

Since many of the map's addresses aren't updated when stars move, often new owners also have to put up with fans. Like television producer William Harbach's former wife Fay, who lives in Milton Berle's old house. "One afternoon I was out at the pool in a very tiny bikini," Fay laughs, "and I decided to go out front to pick some roses. And as I bent down with my backside to the street, I suddenly heard this voice call out over a loudspeaker: ' . . . And there's Mrs. Berle now!' Then snapshots started going off from every seat in the tourist bus!"

To celebrities, however, that constant swarm of belching buses and cars is no laughing matter. Carol Burnett is actually moving because the maps have created such a circus at her house. "If they stop me on the street, peachy; or in a restaurant, fine," she says, "but my home is the only place left where I can have some privacy. One day we had a family walk right into the kitchen and demand a tour of the house. When my daughter asked them to leave, they got very huffy. 'We certainly will not,' they said. 'We came all the way from Ohio to see this!'" Carol's doorbell is rung as early as 5 A.M. and as late as midnight. "When I think about what could happen to the children if some unbalanced person got the map," she says, "the fur really goes up on the back of my neck. I wish they were against the law."

As a matter of fact, Mrs. Welton was arrested in 1973 and kept off her corner for almost a year by a Los Angeles City ordinance prohibiting the sale of any merchandise except newspapers on city streets. That ordinance, aimed specifically at Mrs. Welton, was passed after businessmen and celebrities near her Bel-Air corner complained to their city councilman.

Mrs. Welton's attorney took her case to a state appeals court, which overturned the city ordinance and put her back on Sunset. But the city attorney, worried that the decision opens the streets to any sidewalk salesmen, is appealing.

"The people in this area," argues Mrs. Welton, "don't stop to think that tourists enjoy driving up these streets. If they're going to be stars, they should expect this. And if they don't like it, they shouldn't be stars." Actually, few celebrities would be up in arms if tourists followed the warning on Mrs. Welton's map and only drove slowly by the houses. But they don't.

Lucille Ball was once sitting in bed under a hair dryer when fans strolled into the room. "I've been living with this for 20 years," she says. "When they walk into the house like it's a museum, I just tell them this is not a conducted tour." But her friends recall a much more Lucy-like response. When tourists set up a picnic on the lawn in front of her huge white colonial home one sunny Sunday, Lucy had the sprinklers turned on.

Sonny and Cher tried a different tactic. They had so many people ringing the bell at the Spanish estate they used to share that they moved the bell on the huge iron gates to a hidden spot that only their friends knew—thus becoming the owners of Hollywood's first unlisted doorbell.

Mario Thomas says everyone in her family long ago moved to narrow, winding hillside roads that are hard for tourists to find. "That's because when I was a kid," she explains, "we used to have big Sunday dinners at a table that sat in a big bay window. And every week people sat and stared at us while we ate the whole meal. So we ended up always turning the lights off and eating dinner in the dark."

And that is really why the maps make stars see red. Because fans who have spent years welcoming stars into their living rooms, as the old cliche goes, can't seem to understand why they shouldn't be welcome into the stars' homes as well. When that family barged into Carol Burnett's house, they informed her daughter: "We know Carol won't mind." When Joey Bishop once left his house at 2 in the afternoon, two ladies who had been sitting out front since 6:30 that morning bawled him out for not coming out sooner.

And one day Andy Williams arrived home to find four fans, in bathing suits, swimming in his pool. "When I asked them to leave," he says, "they stopped swimming long enough to tell me they weren't going. At that point I really started screaming. So they got out, and as they walked out my driveway they yelled back at me: 'You're not as nice as you seem on TV!'"

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS

RED SKELETON may be coming back to television as host of some specials next season. He's been talking to network emissaries sent to his Palm Springs home. In the meantime, Red is playing fair dates, writing scripts and selling his paintings . . . RICHARD DAWSON is host of a new syndicated version of Masquerade Party, the celebrity-laden panel show that ran for years on TV. ALAN GILBERT, producer of Let's Make a Deal, is producing the new Masquerade, which presents a masked celebrity for the panel to identify . . . Another oldie, Name That Tune, is being revived by Ralph Edwards Productions. TOM KENNEDY will be the host of that one.

PHILIP ABBOTT, who served on The FBI for nine years, has taken his role seriously and produced a miniseries of educational films under the auspices of the U.S. Justice Dept. and the National District Attorneys Association. "The idea is to stimulate attitudes regarding the law," Abbott said of his Under the Law series, which is being distributed in schools. Narrators for Abbott's series are JAMES FRANCISCUS, GAIL FISHER, PETER GRAVES and ROOSEVELT GRIER . . . ROBERT CULP will star in From Sea to Shining Sea, a syndicated series of historical dramas, the first of which is entitled "Give Me Liberty." The shows will deal with America from Colonial days to the present and will be produced over a three-year period. Culp, whose wife SHEILA SULLIVAN will appear in "Give Me Liberty," portrays a character who "is meant to represent the prevailing attitudes of Americans at various times in history."

Where are they now?: FRANK SUTTON, the bellowing Sergeant Carter to JIM NABORS' hick-town private in Gomer Pyle--USMC for five years, has been touring the theater circuit and making only rare TV appearances since the series went off the network. It is "by choice" that he is "staying out of TV," Sutton said recently, after he returned from a Columbus, Ohio, production of "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers." Earlier this year he was one of the stars in an ABC TV-movie, "The Hurricane," which will be telecast this fall. "It's a very dramatic role," Sutton said. "He's a heavy. Two years ago, every time my agents put me in for something like this, the producers would say, 'He's a comedian.' Now we're getting a little distance between Gomer and what I'll do the next time." Distance or not, it is Gomer that gave Sutton the financial security to "do the things I want to do," such as starring in a Shreveport, La., production of "Luv" for five weeks this summer.

A disastrous fire at Goldwyn Studio destroyed parts of the Cannon and Barnaby Jones sets. Cannon lost an expensive penthouse suite; Barnaby Jones' main office, outer office, laboratory, props and antique furniture were destroyed in the blaze. The fire, however, won't hold up the production of next season's episodes.

THE AMORYS

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

This year the Amory Academy decided to hold a no-host show. You know, like the Oscars. It didn't work, though. John Huston was eliminated because it was felt that if he got any more earnest he would have to have an interpreter. Burt Reynolds was eliminated because he apparently makes people uncomfortable with his clothes on. As for David Niven, he was the only one who could've done the job—but it took so much time to eliminate the others there wasn't any time left for him. So, in the end it was decided to let everybody introduce himself—a terrific idea incidentally. Anyway, here are the awards:

Best Actor in a Dramatic Show—Telly Savalas (Kojak). Honorable Mention—Anthony Hopkins (Pierre in War and Peace).

Best Actress in a Dramatic Show—Jean Marsh (Rose in Upstairs, Downstairs). Honorable Mention—Morag Hood (Natasha in War and Peace).

Best Supporting Actor in a Dramatic Show—a three-way tie: Gordon Jackson (Hudson in Upstairs, Downstairs). John Alderton (Watkins in Upstairs, Downstairs) and Ralph Waite (The Waltons).

Best Supporting Actress in a Dramatic Show—another three-way tie: Angela Baddeley (Mrs. Bridges in Upstairs, Downstairs), Nicola Pagett (Elizabeth in Upstairs, Downstairs) and Rachel Gurney (Lady Marjorie in Upstairs, Downstairs).

Best Actor in a Comedy—Carroll O'Connor (All in the Family). Our trio of Honorable Mentions—Redd Foxx

(Sanford and Son), Bob Newhart and James Coco (Calucci's Dept.).

Best Actress in a Comedy—Mary Tyler Moore. Honorable Mention—Diana Rigg (Diana) and Beatrice Arthur (Maude).

Best Supporting Actor in a Comedy—Edward Asner and Ted Knight (The Mary Tyler Moore Show). Honorable Mention—Rob Reiner (All in the Family), Demond Wilson (Sanford and Son).

Best Supporting Actress in a Comedy—a four-way tie: Valerie Harper (The Mary Tyler Moore Show), Suzanne Pleshette (The Bob Newhart Show), Adrienne Barbeau (Maude) and Susan St. James (McMillan & Wife).

Special Award for Support of Each Other—Karl Malden and Michael Douglas (The Streets of San Francisco).

Best Talk Show—Tonight, with Johnny Carson. Honorable Mention—The Mike Douglas Show.

Best Newscaster—Walter Cronkite.

Best Interviewer—William Buckley.

Best Interviewee—William Buckley.

Best New Drama Series—Kojak. Honorable Mention—Police Story.

Best New Comedy Series—Good Times.

Best New Comedy Series to Be Canceled—Calucci's Dept.
